humanity, Dyspepsia rises into painful prominence. Its ravages not only destroy prominence. Its ravages not only destroy the body, but it preys upon the mind, ren-dering its victims utterly wretched. The numbers that suffer from this disease are computed by tens of thousands. It is the prevailing malady of civilized life. Many remedies have been applied, but no perma-neat cures; no positive removal of the dis-tressing spmptoms has been effected until Dr. Tutt, of New York, after twentyfive years of study, succeeded in compounding a pill that meets all the difficulties of the case.
